The duplex dwelling at 5 Church Street in Berlin is a 2- $\frac{1}{2}$ story frame structure, rectangular in shape. The principal (west) facade is six bays, gable side, doors occupying the second and fifth bays from left. The doors have rectangular side and transom lights; windows throughout are 6/1. Each entrance is covered by a small gable-roofed portico with plain square columns and wooden steps, railing. The portico and main roof overhang have exposed rafter ends as well as two shed roof dormers in the roof centered over the entrances. The dormer windows are three single sashes with six panes each. Siding on the dwelling is unpainted sawn wood shingles. An exterior brick chimney is located in each gable end, and an interior chimney rises from the center of the rear roof plane. The structure's high foundation with basement windows is built of ashlar-faced block.

Prepare both a summary paragraph of significance and a general statement of history and support.

Located on the site of the Berlin Academy, a school for girls that existed until the late 19th century, the present structure shows no easily discernable evidence of being connected to or having expanded from that older structure. The early 20th century dwelling is similar in scale and materials to many other dwellings in Berlin, although few have exposed rafters or a duplex plan.
